FOUNDING PROSPECTUS

A quarterly journal in preparation

Business Review Quarterly

Business insight. Practical judgement.
An African perspective.

Leadership · Finance · Governance · Enterprise

A journal for consequential business decisions

Financeium Business Review Quarterly is being established as a forum for thoughtful business writing: work that helps leaders understand their choices, test their assumptions and act with greater care.

The proposed editorial focus connects leadership, governance, finance and enterprise development with the realities of African organisations. Public and private institutions face different obligations, but both need sound judgement, credible evidence and an honest account of results.

This founding prospectus sets out a proposed direction for discussion. It is not a published journal issue, a statement of accreditation or an announcement of an appointed editorial board.

Founding editor

Dr Meiya G Nthoesane

Quarterly publication

Four editions per year. Issue dates and the inaugural edition will be announced once the editorial programme is approved.

Readers

Executives, managers, entrepreneurs, coaches, researchers and public-sector leaders who value useful analysis rather than easy answers.

Research that meets practice

Leadership & organisational capability

Leadership judgement, coaching and mentoring, team development and organisational maturity.

Enterprise & finance

Business planning, funding readiness, financial resilience and sustainable enterprise growth.

Governance & accountability

Audit readiness, ethical conduct, internal controls and the responsibilities of public and private institutions.

Strategy & innovation

Technology adoption, business models, productivity and change in organisations.

Cases & conversations

Carefully documented organisational cases and interviews, with consent and clear sourcing.

Books & perspectives

Critical book reviews and concise, well-supported viewpoints.

> The sections above are proposed and remain subject to revision by the editorial team. The founding prospectus does not claim accreditation, indexing or an appointed editorial board.

The standards behind the review

Proposed contribution formats

Research-informed features, practitioner essays, documented cases, interviews and book reviews. Detailed word limits and submission dates will be confirmed by the founding editor.

Evidence and originality

Contributors should identify sources, distinguish findings from opinion, disclose relevant interests and obtain permission for third-party material. Confidential client or organisational information should not be published without consent.

Editorial consideration

The proposed process is an initial scope review, editorial assessment, author revision, copy-editing and final proof approval. Independent peer review, where appropriate, must be arranged and confirmed; it is not claimed as an established service.

Rights and publication details

Contributor agreements, licensing, the editorial board and publication identifiers remain to be finalised. No ISSN, indexing status or academic accreditation is claimed.

Contribute to the founding edition

Send an article proposal, a short author biography and the central argument you wish to develop to learn@financeium.com. Enquiries are not a guarantee of acceptance.
